This research explores perceptions of the New Albany-Plain Local Schools among district residents.

It taps opinions on myriad school-related issues from two perspectives: the community at large and residents with children who, in the recently-completed academic year, were enrolled in the New Albany Schools.
Methodology
• Telephone interviews were conducted with 450 adult residents of the New Albany-Plain Local School District.

• Three hundred (300) of those residents were drawn at random from the most recent list of registered voters available from the Ohio Secretary of State. Within this sample, 125 residents, or 42%, were parents* of children enrolled in the New Albany Schools.

• The remaining 150 interviews were conducted with parents not interviewed previously, selected at random from a list provided by district officials.

• This procedure allows for two robust analyses, one of the community at large (300) and a second of parents (275).

• The Margin of Error, or MoE, for each analysis is approximately ≤±5.7 percentage points at the 95 percent level of confidence.

*Throughout this report, the term “parent” refers to any adult responsible for a child enrolled in the New Albany Schools.
• All of these interviews:
  • were conducted from Monday, May 6, through Saturday, May 25;
  • averaged 16 minutes in length; and
  • were completed with residents on cell phones (89%) and landlines (11%).

• To complete the 450 interviews, 7,751 unique telephone numbers were dialed at least once, yielding a ratio of approximately 17 to 1.

• Finally, as the table on the following slide demonstrates, residents comprising the community sample reflect all adults living in the district on several key dimensions, involving geography, gender, age, and children enrolled in the New Albany Schools.

Satisfaction With School Officials
• At least eight out of ten residents are satisfied with the efforts of school officials to:
  • Facilitate, with the city, commercial growth and development;
  • Keep residents informed of important school-related issues; and
  • Plan for the district’s future.
• According to seven out of ten, school officials:
  • Seek input and feedback from the community;
  • Listen to the concerns of residents; and
  • Manage the district’s finances wisely.
• Fewer residents – six out of ten – are impressed with efforts to implement cost-saving measures to stretch taxpayer dollars to 2023.

Q10: This next question addresses the performance of school officials in various areas ... tell me if you are very satisfied, somewhat satisfied, somewhat dissatisfied, or very dissatisfied.
Residents were presented with four initiatives school officials consider “high priority” and encouraged to identify the most important. The four include:

- Academic achievement and growth;
- Fiscal responsibility;
- Student safety; and
- Student social emotional well-being and mental health supports.
For a plurality of voters, academic achievement and growth is the most important initiative – followed closely by two of the remaining three.

Q21: Thinking about the New Albany Schools, which of these four initiatives is most important?
Residents were asked:

“... is there anything ... you’d like to see the New Albany Schools start doing, stop doing, or do better?”

Many of the comments involve new programs and services, such as full-day Kindergarten, classes for foreign languages not currently taught, and more security on campus.

Other comments reflect changes in policies and practices, such as greater fiscal transparency, fewer emails, and less standardized testing.

Typical comments appear on the following slides.*

*All of the comments are available in a separate document.
“Have better options for childcare when school is closed.”

“Begin an IB program.”

“They need more supports for students.”

“I would like to see the athletic facilities improved.”

“I would like to see smaller classroom sizes.”

“Reduce the pay-to-play athletic fees.”

“Offer more support for struggling high school students.”

“Stop sending out so many emails.”

“Make it easier to navigate the website and get information online. Have more concise emails.”

“They need more buses.”

“Stop wasting money.”

“I would like to see more of a security presence on all school campuses.”

“Offer all-day Kindergarten as a standard without extra cost.”

“Focus more on vocational studies, languages ... home economics and shop.”

“They need more extracurricular sports in elementary schools.”

“Stop serving so much unhealthy food.”

“They need to better handle traffic coming in and out. Kids are exposed in two or three spots. It’s just not safe.”
“Bring back some educational assistance and lower class size.”

“Stop paying the teachers so much so they can afford more teachers.”

“I wish they would do more field trips for the younger students.”

“Make STEM a priority.”

“They should start serving free food.”

“Get the opinions of the students ... when it comes to teacher evaluations.”

“I’d like to see more choices of foreign language classes.”

“Have better transparency about spending.”

“Get away from standardized testing.”

“Transportation should be provided for preschoolers.”

“We need more programs for gifted students.”

“Stop making plans without a clear vision.”

“We need more specialized activities for special needs students.”

“They could do better with the diversity of faculty.”

“Stop emphasizing that college is for everyone.”

“They need more funding for ... music, visual, ... and performing arts ....”

“They need more variety in after school programs.”
If the suggested changes require additional funding, less than half the community is likely to support a property tax increase to provide that funding.

Q20: If implementing your suggestion required more funding, would you support a property tax increase to pay for that change?

- Would support a tax increase: 44%
- Would not support a tax increase: 48%
- Not sure: 8%

Would By Age:
- 56% 18-34
- 47% 35-54
- 31% 55+

Would By Geography:
- 44% New Albany
- 30% Plain Twnshp
- 47% Columbus

This finding is difficult to interpret for several reasons. For example: Many suggestions may have been offered, perhaps correctly, with the expectation that additional revenue would not be needed.

Overall Impressions
Two out of three parents consider the New Albany Schools excellent. Even more consider the district on track, heading in the right direction. Almost all believe the New Albany Schools are friendly and welcoming, well-maintained, safe for students, and committed to creating a culture of accountability that achieves the best academic and developmental outcomes for each student.

Perceptions of non-parents and parents of the oldest children tend to be less positive.

Q9: For each of the following statements about the New Albany Schools, tell me if you agree strongly, agree somewhat, disagree somewhat, or disagree strongly.
School Responsibilities
When parents were queried on five responsibilities of the New Albany Schools, the two most important were academic excellence and mental health supports.

By contrast, few parents considered transportation to and from school among the most pressing responsibilities.
Nearly nine out of ten parents selected academic excellence as one of the two most important responsibilities of the New Albany Schools. More than four out of ten chose mental health supports.

Q26: Here are five of the many responsibilities of the New Albany Schools. Once I’ve read them, tell me which two you feel are most important ...? (parents only)
Initiatives
Parents
Of four initiatives school officials describe as “high priority,” a plurality of parents consider academic achievement and growth the top priority.

Almost as many, however, favored student safety and social emotional well-being and mental health supports.
For a plurality of parents, academic achievement and growth is the top initiative, though not by much. The opinions of non-parents are similar.

Q21: Thinking about the New Albany Schools, which of these four initiatives is most important?

- Academic achievement & growth: 35% (Parents 35%, Non-Parents 34%)
- Student social emotional well-being/mental health supports: 29% (Parents 29%, Non-Parents 27%)
- Student safety: 29% (Parents 29%, Non-Parents 24%)
- Fiscal responsibility: 6% (Parents , Non-Parents 13%)
The School Environment
At least nine out of ten parents agree their children feel safe at school, fit in at school, and have a caring relationship with at least one adult at school.

Nearly all parents also agree they feel welcome and comfortable when visiting the school their child attends.
Q27: I have several statements about the New Albany school your (oldest) child attends. As I read each statement, tell me if you agree strongly, agree somewhat, disagree somewhat, or disagree strongly. (parents only)

Well-Being Programs
Most parents agree that the New Albany Schools are focused on the social emotional needs of children and provide programs and staff to address those needs.
The school district provides programs for parents which are geared toward educating parents about the social emotional needs of students.

School counselors and mental health clinicians are available for my child during the school day.

Teachers, staff, administrators, and the Board of Education are focused on the social emotional needs of students.

There are resources available to my child that address his/her social emotional well-being while at school.

Classes

Parents
Nearly all parents agree – many strongly – that:

- Their child is challenged academically;
- Teachers are partners who value the input of parents;
- The data they receive about their child is clearly explained;
- More challenging work is available to students who need it;
- Teachers help students to catch up when they fall behind; and
- Teachers notice when students have trouble learning.
When students know the material being taught, they get opportunities for more advanced work

I receive clearly-presented data that explain my child’s academic performance

Teachers partner with me and listen to my input to help my child succeed

My child’s curriculum is academically challenging

Seven out of ten parents believe that discipline at their child’s school is adequately strict. Roughly two out of ten disagrees, with most claiming it is not strict enough.

Q29: Is the discipline at your child’s school too strict, not strict enough, or just about right? (parents only)
Administrators

Parents
• At least eight out of ten parents agree – again, many strongly – that the district’s administrative staff:

• Are visible on campus before and after school;

• Ensure appropriate lines of communication to maintain a school climate that is positive and safe;

• Value and engage parents as an integral part of the school community;

• Provide strong lines of communication to inform and engage parents; and

• Are easy for students to talk with.

Satisfaction With School Officials
• At least nine out of ten parents are satisfied with how school officials:
  • Keep local residents informed of important issues;
  • Facilitate, with the city, commercial growth and development; and
  • Plan for the future.

• At least eight out of ten are satisfied with how school officials:
  • Manage the district’s finances;
  • Seek input and feedback from the community; and
  • Listen to the concerns of local residents.
Among non-parents, across all of these issues, satisfaction, on average, is 17 percentage points lower with the greatest differences in the following areas:

- Listening to the concerns of local residents (23 pp lower);
- Managing the district’s finances (21 pp lower);
- Being transparent about the district’s finances (21 pp lower); and
- Implementing cost-saving measures to extend taxpayer dollars through 2023 (21 pp lower).

On average, non-parents were twice as likely to have no opinion on these issues (32% to 16%); notably, this does not account for their less positive perceptions.

Observations
• Among community residents, impressions of the New Albany Schools, across myriad dimensions, are positive. Indeed, a majority of residents describe the schools as both excellent and heading in the right direction.

• Positive impressions of the New Albany Schools are notably more common among parents with children enrolled in the schools – and less common among non-parents, residents of Plain Township, and older residents, the overlap notwithstanding.

• Overall, non-parents know less about the New Albany Schools and, as a consequence, have fewer opinions. That said, many of these residents, especially men, are open to more information about the schools.

• For many residents, both parents and non-parents, the district’s top priorities should center on academic achievement, safety, and mental health, areas where most agree the New Albany Schools are currently strong.
• Areas where residents perceive the district as less strong include class size (many want smaller classes), listening to the concerns of local residents (many want more listening), and fiscal responsibility (many want more transparency). In addition, most residents were either unaware of or dissatisfied with the district’s efforts to implement cost-saving measures to extend taxpayer dollars through 2023.

• Despite these perceived weaknesses, the vast majority of residents believe the New Albany Schools are committed to creating a culture of accountability that achieves the best academic and developmental outcomes for each student.
